At around the time I began to understand that my secondary characters and I might have much more to give to one another, I read Jane Smiley's novella "The Age of Grief" and was struck by the amount of attention given to non-central figures on the page. "The Age of Grief" is a first person narrative, told by David Hurst, a dentist.

The Age of Grief by Jane Smiley. I absolutely love this book. It is one of my favorite collections of contemporary short stories and what amounts to a novella by the same name (The Age of Grief) which was made into a superb independent film called "The Secret Lives of Dentists" that follows Smiley's work faithfully.
