What a film! Watching 'Sleeping Murder' scared me more than any other Miss Marple film, mainly due to the suspense. The version with Joan Hickson was much, much better than that with Geraldine McEwan, mainly because the director stuck to the plot and didn't add a silly romance between the protagonist and her aide to supposedly warm the hearts of the audience.

Sleeping Murder one of favourite Miss Marple story's, I enjoyed it but wished Stephanie Cole was more herself. I felt putting on some accents is not her strongest points, I am a huge fan of hers but being herself would have made this more natural. I also wish that each chapter was told to us, I didn't hear it in the Joan Hickson versions.
