Survival: A Thematic Guide to Canadian Literature. Survival: A Thematic Guide to Canadian Literature is a survey of Canadian literature by Margaret Atwood, one of the best-known Canadian authors. It was first published by House of Anansi in 1972. A work of literary criticism, as Atwood writes in her preface to the 2004 edition,...

Survival: A Thematic Guide to Canadian Literature - Wikipedia

Atwood's Survival was a seminal book for me back in the 1970's. Her theory that there are national themes in literature is very useful for studying cultures generally. The rap on the book is that she has not done a thorough, scholarly job of research and tends to favour references to books written by her friends or published by her publisher.

Luckily, Survival reads as anything but a textbook. Atwood makes it clear that the read is not intended to be an overview. In her foreword, she acknowledges the limitations of her work - she mostly deals with modern (the book was written in 1972) authors and does not attempt to survey the entire country's mass of works.

For early explorers and settlers, it meant bare survival in the face of "hostile" elements and/or natives: carving out a place and a way of keeping alive. But the word can also suggest survival of a crisis or disaster, like a hurricane or a wreck, and many Canadian poems have this kind of survival as a theme; what you might call 'grim' survival ...
