Response to Species of Spaces and Other Pieces by Georges Perec 1. We realize the existence of something only when extraordinary happens to that something, whether "the something" be an object or an event. We are surprised by the result but we neglect to realize that the extraordinary result resulted because there was an underlying, ordinary ...

Species of Spaces and Other Pieces (Georges Perec) Perec makes a clear distinction of how he experiences his town (Paris) and foreign towns. The complexity of towns become apparent, therefore trying to simplify them through planning and sociology is far removed from the experiential writing of Perec.
