Community Reviews. Tell Us We're Home is the story of three teenage girls who are the daughters of immigrants. Over the course of the novel, the story alternates point of view, and each girl has the chance to tell her story. Jaya, Lola, and Maria all felt awkward and alone attending school with the children their parents work for.

Tell Us We're Home by Marina Budhos - Goodreads

Tell Us We're Home. Being the daughter of a maid or nanny, it wasn't like everyone was so bad or mean or stupid. It was just weird. You knew your mother put extra bleach in the underwear of some girl who was walking up the aisle at assembly in her best corduroy jumper dress. Or those shoes you wore were some hand-me-downs from the kid in...

Tell Us We're Home by Marina Budhos In a tony New Jersey suburb, artistic Jaya, outspoken Lola, and shy Maria find an instant bond with each other, recognizing their outsider experiences of being the daughters of immigrant mothers who work as housekeepers and nannies for the wealthy families of their eighth-grade classmates.

Tell Us We're Home by Marina Budhos | BookDragon

Having read Tell Us We're Home, Budhos has now become a must-read author for me, one of those authors whom I'd gladly pre-order any new releases. I connected deeply with this novel, so much so that there were moments too painful to bear, moments wherein I had to stop and close my eyes, because it hit too close to home.

A World of Paper Hearts: Review: Tell Us We're Home

TELL US WE'RE HOME by Marina Budhos is a devastating powerful story that quietly sliced me up and left me bleeding. I've experienced the discomfort of feeling like I don't belong. I don't know why certain kids seem to develop an inclination toward exclusion and seem determined to make sure others know that they don't belong.
