"My wife, Utchka (whose name I sometime ago shortened to Utch), could teach patience to a time bomb." The darker vision and sexual ambiguities of this erotic, ironic tale about a ménage à quatre in a New England university town foreshadow those of The World According to Garp; but this very trim and precise novel is a marked departure from the author's generally robust, boisterous style.

This energetic, often intelligent novel about a four-way marriage has as much sleight-of-hand as the earlier Nabokov but avoids the master's aestheticism. Indeed, Vladimir himself receives some pinching satire as a lecherous faculty novelist named Helmbart (read Humbert Humbert) who can't keep his fingers off the ladies' nether attractions.
